

New Beginnings for Tribal Students (NBTS) Program Presents
Mentoring Indigenous Students in STEM and OSU Resources
April 26th, 2022 1:00 – 4:30 PST (zoom)

Keynote: Dr. Sweeney Windchief of Montana State University.

Dr. Sweeney Windchief is a member of the Fort Peck Tribes (Assiniboine) in Montana and serves as an Associate Professor in the Department of Education at Montana State University (MSU). He is a lead partner in the collaborative Indigenous Mentoring Program at MSU.

Dr. Windchief will facilitate faculty insights into effectively mentoring Indigenous students, with a focus on the STEM fields.

The training will also feature an overview of OSU resources and new developments serving Indigenous and Native American students with:

- Scott Vignos, Interim Vice President and Chief Diversity Officer, OSU Office of Institutional Diversity
- Christy Jones, OSU Native American & Indigenous Student Success Coordinator
- Dr. Luhui Whitebear, OSU Kaku-Ixt Mana Ina Haws Director and Assistant Professor
- Dr. Allison Davis-White Eyes to moderate a discussion panel sharing insights and stories about mentor / mentee experiences.

- Gain insights into effectively mentoring Native American students, especially in STEM fields.
- Explore ways to move from cultural competence toward cultural humility.
- Maintain equity in teaching by facilitating and supporting the success and advancement of students from a diverse array of backgrounds.

This virtual zoom training is intended for all interested faculty, mentors, intern supervisors, students, and all NBTS committee participants.
